2. Briefly describe the rationale for assignment to foundation area(s) and subgroup(s) chosen.

   Italian Cinema and Culture in English bears the subtitle Sex and Politics. It examines, with Italy as case study and cinema as medium, (A) the imbrication of these two fields; (B) the social construction of normative gender and sexual orientation; (C) the political ramifications of libinal energies in key periods of history (e.g., fascism, the student revolutions of the 1960-70s, gay liberation); (D) the effects of subjective identification provided by both sexual practice and political affiliation; and finally (E) the “confusion,” as it were, of one category with another that informs state legislation of such issues as abortion, divorce, and so on. At the same time, the course delves deeply into ways in which the “cinematic apparatus” operates on social consciousness and abets the ideological interests of both producers and consumers of the most influential art form in the world. Students in this course receive a packed education in critical theorists from Plato to Nietzsche, and from Freud and Reich to Marcuse and Adorno.

   This course, which has been taught at UCLA annually for twenty years by Prof. Harrison, Chair of Italian, once fulfilled the Visual and Performance Arts Analysis and Practice requirement, and should return to doing so. It is also perfectly germane to the Social Analysis specialization of Foundations of Society and Culture, stacking up favorably to other courses currently listed under that rubric. Italian Cinema and Culture is truly and broadly a general education course exploring fundamental principles of normative social practice in the West.

5. GE Course Units

Is this an existing course that has been modified for inclusion in the new GE? Yes   X   No

If yes, provide a brief explanation of what has changed.

The course structure has not changed. Three papers are still required, as well as weekly quizzes, midterm and final exams, and TA discussion sections. A syllabus is attached.
6. Please present concise arguments for the GE principles applicable to this course.

- General Knowledge
  - THEORETICALLY: Understanding sexuality as a social practice, and political decision making as informative of those social practices which all too often are perceived as natural and naive.
  - HISTORICALLY: There is much instruction on world-structuring events in history such as Italian Fascism of 1922-1945, World War II, the student rebellions, racism and sexism in Italy and the world, on the workings of religion and political doctrine (socialism, anarchism, liberal individualism).

- Integrative Learning
  - Understanding of the ideological propagation of ideas through art. Appreciation for the ambiguity, multiplicity, and even contradictions imbedded in a single “work” and in an an ostensibly single political system.

- Ethical Implications
  - Reflection on the ways subjects are shaped through hegemonic discourses of the popular arts; on invisible indoctrination and its obverse, critical agency, evoking iat all points our own responsibility for moral decisions.

- Cultural Diversity
  - Constant comparisons are drawn between American and foreign culture; on sexist prejudice and discrimination. Principles of Eurocentric superiority and masculinist ideology—of the “white north” as exploiter of the “dark south”—are consistently targeted by the films, stressing syndromes of intellective passivity and citizens’ complicity with power.

- Critical Thinking
  - Students must report critically on three films by relating them to theoretical readings by feminists like Laura Mulvey or psychologists like Wilhelm Reich. In doing so they are required to invoke film-critical concepts like point of view, mise-en-scene, montage, framing, soundtrack, etc.

- Rhetorical Effectiveness
  - Teaching assistants and the professor of the course carefully comment on and correct students’ compositions, insisting on objective argumentation, on factual support, on original and articulate expression. The films and the political positions represented therein come across as nothing other than bold instances of cultural and ethical rhetoric.

- Problem-solving
  - The course serves as a platform for students to solve their own analogous ethical problems in 2016, as they see versions of their contemporary dilemmas unfolding in foreign climes and a number of divergent historical situations.

- Library & Information Literacy
  - This is a multimedial course which sensitizes students to the respectively different data of audiovision, philosophy, history, psychology, and sociology. It poses the challenge of sorting out and rendering mutually coherent these different facets of a human mind and society.

DESCRIPTION: This course examines interrelations between two prominent concerns of Italian culture—sex and politics. Italian cinema is one of the best places to trace these interrelations. Not only is film a voyeuristic medium (catering to what we want to see, to various economies of desire), but it also is a highly politicized one. Indeed, along with popular music it is probably the prime political force of our time. This course will consist in a detailed, close reading of nine films, contextualized by accompanying materials on Italian history and politics, psychology, philosophy, sociology, and film theory. The history covered by the films and readings runs the span of the 20th century, with one foray into the Middle Ages.

GOALS OF THE COURSE: To foster a sense of
- how sex and politics pervade artistic contexts that seem to be innocent of them
- the intimate ties that obtain between sexual and institutional politics in Italian culture
- historical and ideological patterns in Italy between the late nineteenth century and today
- the aesthetics of cinema, including a sense of varying filmic styles
- the basics and methods of film analysis

COURSE REQUIREMENTS:
- PREPARATION: Serious and thoughtful reaction to the films and lectures. Personal reflection and close attention to the readings.
- DISCUSSION SECTIONS: Regular attendance at lectures and active engagement in discussion sections is most strongly urged. Weekly or nearly weekly quizzes in discussion sections will gauge preparation of the films and readings. You must also participate in the class website’s online discussion forum, contributing a weekly reaction to each film screened. Overall performance in these discussion sections will make up 20% of your final grade.
- PAPERS: Three short reaction papers of 550-700 words on assigned topics, the first due on ONE of the first three films, the second on one of the second three films, and the third on one of the last three films. Topics will be assigned on Tuesdays and papers will be due Friday three days later. You must write on one film in week 1, 2, or 3, and one in week 4, 5, or 6, and one in week 7, 8, or 9. No other combination or timetable is allowed. All papers must be submitted online via Turn-it-in (to your own TA’s section). Access Turn-it-in through the “Study List” link in your MyUCLA account. NO PAPER COPIES OR EMAIL ATTACHMENTS WILL BE ACCEPTED. Papers not submitted via Turn-it-in will be given a grade of “zero.” DO NOT SEND YOUR PAPERS VIA EMAIL OR PRINT THEM OUT. You are responsible for keeping word count on these papers and keeping within the limits of the assigned length to receive a good grade. You are not allowed to use any outside sources for these papers, including Web Sites. Unacknowledged borrowings from critical writings will be considered plagiarism (see below). The papers should be very well written, and show close attention to the basics of argument construction, spelling, grammar, and proof-reading. Content will count for 70% of its grade, form for 30% (eg., a paper with excellent ideas but poor writing will not receive an A). Topics for papers will be assigned only once—at the actual start of the film Tuesday, not by phone or e-mail earlier or later than that. NO LATE PAPERS WILL BE ACCEPTED, nor can they be made up or rewritten.
- EXAMS: Midterm and final exams, consisting of 50-75 multiple-choice questions, definitions, identifications, and hands-on analyses of scenes from films. No exceptions (except for religious holidays) will be made to the scheduled times and dates of the exams. You cannot make them up.
- FILMS: Will be screened in class on Tuesdays, preceded by an introduction. Films may also be screened individually in the Instructional Media Laboratory, 270 Powell Library. See the three films you choose to write about TWICE.
- GRADING BREAKDOWN: Discussion section & quizzes 20% / Three Papers 30% / Midterm 20% / Final 30%.
- REQUIRED READINGS (all books are available at the UCLA textbook bookstore in Ackermann Union):
  - Millicent Marcus, Italian Film in the Light of Neorealism
  - Sigmund Freud, Civilization and Its Discontents
  - Giovanni Boccaccio, The Decameron, preferably the Penguin Edition. (The Decameron should be begun well before the film screening)
  - A photocopied anthology of readings (Italian 46 Reader) must be obtained at Course Reader Material, 1081 Westwood Blvd., 310/443.3303. Entrance is at Broxton Avenue, south of City of LA Parking.
  - Articles placed on line at the class website. This will be announced as we go along.
A NOTE ON PLAGIARISM. Those insecure about their writing, or who feel they have insufficient time to do it, and who thus may seek speedy remedy in published film criticism, should resist the temptation. You are not allowed to use outside sources in writing your papers, where we want you to think critically on your own. Please carefully study UCLA’s policies on plagiarism before looking for inspiration on the Internet or elsewhere, the consequences of which can be severe. (It is also very unlikely—given four instructors who know film criticism well—that you will succeed in presenting ideas that are not your own.) Students in this course have been sanctioned or suspended from UCLA for plagiarism. Exams. We also expect honest, individual performance on exams. If, in the opinion of at least two instructors, a student is thought to be cheating on an exam, that student will automatically fail the exam.
