

Sample language for a hypothetical GE course, Exploring the Transatlantic World, 1450-1650:

GE Credit Acknowledgment: Upon successful completion of this course, students will satisfy two General Education requirements in two foundation areas, namely Historical Analysis in the Society and Culture Foundation Area, and Literary and Cultural Analysis in the Arts and Humanities Foundation Area. Students will gain proficiency in Historical Analysis through the close examination of primary source documents included in each week's readings, which will be discussed in section and provide a source-base for the final paper. The course's consistent engagement with slave memoir literature and fictionalized literary accounts of transatlantic journeys provide a basis for the the Literary and Cultural Analysis credit. For more information, please view your school or college's GE requirements.